GEN. CASS EULOGIZED

The Senate Takes Occasion to Pay Tribute to a Hero's Memory.

ONE WHO FILLED MANY POSITIONS,

And Always With Credit to Himself, His State, and His Country.

HIS STATUE ACCEPTED WITH THANKS. Fifty-Six Long Years of Public Service, and How it Was Terminated.

Resolutions of thanks to the people of Michigan for their statue of General Lewis Cass, presented to the Government, were yesterday adopted by the Senate. Eulogistic remarks were made by a number of Senators. General Cass' long public life was held up as that of a model statesman.

WASHINGTON, February 18 .- In the Senate, to-day, Mr. Palmer, in accordance with previous notice, offered concurrent resolutions returning the thanks of Congress to the Governor and people of the State of Michigan for the statue of Lewis Cass, "whose name is so conspicuously connected with the development of the Northwest territory and with eminent services to his State and country, both at home and abroad;" accepting the same in the name of the nation, and assigning it a place in the old Hall of Representatives. He proceeded to deliver an address in which he spoke of General Cass as one who, more than any other, had been identified with the infancy of Michigan, and who had defended her in war, guided her youthful footsteps, laid down rules of conduct for her, and brought order out of chaos, had (when separated from her by oceans) still clung to her as his home and fondly looked to her soil as the dust with which his own was to commingle.

After a review of the life and public services of General Cass, Mr. Palmer said that he knew of no public man who had filled so many places in the economy of life-teacher, explorer, negotiator of treaties. Governor, lawyer, legislator, marshal, soldier, diplomat, Secretary of War, Sen-stor and Secretary of State, in all of which positions General Case had acquitted himself surprisingly well. In conclusion he said: The mists engendered by the heat, passion and rancor of the crucial time of the nation's history have risen and men are judged not only by their acts but by the results of their acts. It has been said that the highest place in history must be assigned to founders of States: if this be so, certainly the next grada-tion must be assigned to him who builds the superstructure on foundations already laid. To such a place impartial hiegraphy must assign Lewis Cass. The State whose institu-tions he did so much to mold, and in whose soll his ashes repose after a lapse of 22 years—a time sufficient for scrutiny of his acts and their consequences—has decreed through its representatives assembled that he is worthy of place by the side of the great men who stand serene and changeless beneath the dome of the giory of the Republic. Mr. Morrill, at whose instance it was that the old Hall of Representatives was converted into a statuary hall, was the next speaker. He eulogized General Cass, and indicated the names of other illustrious. Americans whose statues would in time stand in the same hall. General Cass, he said belonged to the age of Webster, Clay and Calhoun. He spoke of the termination of General Cass' 56 years of public service by resigning from President Buchanan's Cabinet because of the refusal to reinforce and reprovision Fort Sumter—thus proving himself, like Abdiel, "faithful found among the faithless," and he said, in conclusion: "Let us welcome the statue of Lewis Cass as a felicitous contribution to our American pantheon, where are clustered precious memories that will be for all future generations an inspiration to noble deeds and unselfish devotion to the institutions of a free, enlightened and independent recoils.

THANKS FOR THE STATUE. It remains for us, Mr. President, to formally accept his statue, presented to the nation by the State of Michigan. She invokes consideration for the life and character which it represents, and recalls the calm judgment of the present tribunal-where the nation has gathered (in part) the counterfeit presentments of her heroic sons—with Williams the tolerant, Allen the vehement, Winthrop the devout, and the goodly array of worthies on whom history has set her seal. In that court of last resort where every American must of necessity be his own accuser, defender, and judge, it were well that we should pause, and after calm deliberation, let our consciences enter up the verdict whether or no our aspirations, our aims, and our acts have been and are consistent with the giver of the Republic.

HIS BIRTHPLACE HONORED.

Mr. Chandler was the next speaker. The State of New Hampshire, he said, was, as well as the State of Michigan, honored by weil as the State of Michigan, honored by the statute to-day presented, because Lewis Cass was born in New Hampshire. He thanked the people of Michigan for the ap-propriate memorial which they had this day placed in the National Capitol to one of the most distinguished sons of New Hampshire, and one of New Hampshire, and one of the most eminent citizens of Michigan and the Union, and which Congress now ac-cepted in behalf of a grateful people. He reviewed the compromise measures and the anti-slavery agitation which had led to the organization of the Republican party. He was not prepared to say that the anti-slavery agitators were absolutely unselfish, or wholly sincere, or were, in every way, patriotic; but such had been the opinion of anti-slavery writers and speakers who had endeavored, dispassionately, to review the incidents of the great anti-slavery conflict hefore its culmination in civil war.

If Mr. Webster had been right in his views of the danger of the anti-slavery agi-tation, continued Mr. Chandler, General Cass was equally right; but he had been willing to yield too much to slavery and the South. Certainly it was the duty of all, now that the black cloud of slavery had passed away, to endeavor to judge, favor-ably and charitably, those whose sole con-trolling motive had been devotion to the union of the States.

WHY CASS MOURNED. Mr. Chandler spoke of the sadness and gloom which had settled down on General Case at the time of his resignation from President Buchanan's Cabinet on account of the distracted condition of the country which he had served so long; and he read from a speech of Mr. Garfield, in the House of Representatives, detailing an interview with General Cass about that time, in which General Cass said: "I have loved the Union ever since the sight of General Washington greeted my eyes. I have given 55 years of my life and my best efforts to its preservation. I fear I am doomed to see it perish." But, happily, General Cass had lived to see peace restored and the country "redeemed, regenerated and disenthralled by the irresistible genius of universal eman-

Mr. Morgan expressed his cordial appro val of the resolutions, and his concurrence in the statements and sentiments of the other speakers. He was glad of the opportunity of uniting with other Senators in doing honor to the memory and fame of Lewis Cass. Alabama had never for a moment forgotten to hold Lewis Cass' memory in honor and affectionate remembrance as a patriot, as a soldier, a legislator, and a statesman.

On motion of Mr. Stockbridge the resolutions were adopted unanimously.

THE STATUE UNVEILED.

No Ceremonies Attend the Presentation by the Michigan Commissioners. WASHINGTON, February 18 .- The statue of Lewis Cass, presented to the people of the United States by Michigan, for a place in Statuary Hall at the Capitol, was unveiled to-day. There were no formal exercises in the hall, the commissioners on the part of the State merely removing the cloth that had veiled the statue since it was placed in osition last November. There were present George W. Cass, a grand-nephew, and Mrs. M. G. Van Horne, a grand-niece of General Lewis Cass, both of Chicago; H. B. Ledyard, of Detroit; two members of his family and M. McMillan, related to the Cass family; Dr. Hamilton, E. Smith, Philo Parsons, W. A. Burt and Cantain W. G. Vinton, Commissionar and Cantain Captain W. G. Vinton, commissioners on he part of Michigan.

ASSAULTING DR. BINGAMAN.

The Old Story Reviewed in Court-Testimony as to the Wardrobe, the Fight, and the Doctor's Missing Clothes. The long pending trial of John K. Scott for assaulting Dr. C. F. Bingaman was taken up vesterday in Criminal Court and several witnesses examined.

Mrs. Mason testified that Dr. Bingaman was attending Mrs. Scott at the time of the trouble. Dr. Bingaman then testified he had been their physician for six years. He said on the night of January 10 he had been called into the house to prescribe for Mrs. Scott. He had laid his hat and overcoat aside, when Scott came into the room and raised his hand to strike his wife. Bingaman tried to explain, but was struck in the face and on the head, and was then cut in several places with a butcher knife. The two tussled, and the doctor unbuttoned his coat and vest and tried to slip out of them.

On cross-examination Dr. Bingaman denied that he had hid behind the wardrobe, or that he had assaulted Scott.

John K. Scott, the defendant, testified that he went home that night at 9 o'clock, and found the door of his room locked, and, after waiting a few minutes, he was admitted. He saw a hat lying on the table; but his wife said it was his own. He testified to lighting a match and looking behind the wardrobe, where he saw Dr. Bingaman, who grasped him by the nose and butted him in the stomach. A struggle ensued for the knife, and the man said: "For God's sake don't kill me," and witness said: "Is that you, Doctor?"

He testified that he found the Doctor's overcoat, undercoat, vest, one cuff and a gold watch and chain in the room afterward, and that he gave them to Constable Porter and Wm. Mason. He also found a cuff under the dresser next day. [Cuff exhibited and identified.] Hon. John Dalzell, counsel for Bingaman, closely questioned the witness, and got him somewhat mixed up. He said he did not drink much that day, but wasn't sure whether the doctor backed out or rushed out from behind Selima Taylor testified he had made a diagram of the room at the request of Scott. The wardrobe stood out from the wall just 1 foot and 1 inch. Several responsible witnesses tes-tified to Scott's good character, and Alderman McMasters testified that he had kept the doctor's clothes until Sol Coulson took them away. He said the outer garments were not torn or cut. The case will be taken up again at 9:30 this morning.
